Removing barriers to health care

Council decision to improve access to nurse practitioner in Wilberforce

ELIZABETH BATE

Staff Reporter

Highlands East council approved two resolutions to add services to the Wilberforce Medical Centre at a meeting July

The Bancroft Family Health Team asked council for a resolution to make the Wilberforce Medical Centre a satellite site of the Bancroft team in order to enable a nurse practitioner from that clinic to come to Wilberforce to treat patients.

Sandra McGrath of the Bancroft FHT said the in-town clinic was important to accommodate seniors, which make up more than 25 per cent of the population being treated currently by the Bancroft clinic, and chronically ill patients in the community. "Those patients comprise five per cent of our population, but they use 67 per cent of our health care dollars," she said.

McGrath said there were numerous barriers to having to travel for health care. Many seniors do not own a vehicle and can find it financially prohibitive to travel for doctor's visits, McGrath said. There is also a physical factor to lengthy travel that may be a problem for some.

"We have a lot of patients that are not physically capable of sitting for long car trips," McGrath said. "This is why it's important to being health care right here to the community so people can access it where they need it."

McGrath also applied to bring the Ontario Telemedicine program to the Wilberforce clinic, which would allow patients in need of a specialist to have video appointments and consultations.

The Bancroft clinic had 105 telemedicine visits last year and McGrath calls the program very successful.

On July 13, the board had a meeting discussing the setback and work is already underway to adjust the plan, said board chairman John Kay.

"We have another site within the complex that we're looking at," he said.

"We're confident we're going ahead. The community wants it, the community needs it, the community is going to get it. They've got our total commitment from

According to a press release from HHHS, the ministry of health granted approval for the corporation to tender the construction of the palliative centre as of July 2.

Kay said he can't comment on how long it might take to move forward with the alternative scenario, but he said he hoped it wouldn't be long.

"I just want to reassure the public that this project is going ahead," Kay said.
"We're confident that we have a viable alternative proposal that will go forward and will go forward quickly."

A substantial amount has already been raised by the community for the palliative centre – an indication of how passionate the community is about having enhanced end-of-life care.

The chairman couldn't comment on whether a second plan would incur any new costs, but pointed out that with large infrastructure projects it's common to bump into planning issues along the way.

'We're not the least bit negative about it. We're moving forward positively. We're going to have a palliative care unit. It's that simple," he said.

He expects to have an update on the project by the next HHHS board meeting, which is scheduled for September.

Singing in the rain

Singer Jerelyn Craden belts out a tune with the Highland Swing Band at the opening of Music in the Park in Haliburton on Tuesday, July 7. Rain poured down through most of the show, but audience members came prepared, dressed in raincoats and carrying umbrellas. Chamber targets electricity prices

JENN WATT

Editor

Clarifying the province's billing practices and finding mechanisms to cap or bring down the cost of electricity will go a long way to ensuring the health of the economy, a new report from the Ontario Chamber of Commerce says, and the local chapter of the chamber is echoing that message.

Last week, the Ontario chamber released a comprehensive report on the complicated way the province calculates energy prices, how those prices are hurting the economy and highlighting ways to get the system under control.

Called Empowering Ontario: Constraining Costs and Staying Competitive in the Electricity Market, the report addresses concerns that the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce has long been hearing from its members, manager Rosemarie Jung says.

"I've heard from a number of businesses that have said ... we don't know what our costs are and they'd like to be better informed so they can make decisions and voice their concerns about what they're being charged and how they're being charged," she said on Friday.

charged," she said on Friday.

The 23-page report explains how the province came to have one of the highest advertised electricity rates in North America with predictions of a steady increase in costs.

"Electricity bills are only expected to rise in the future, with industrial customers' bills forecast to increase by 13 per cent over the next five years. The rates for households and small businesses are predicted to climb by 25 per cent over the same period," the report says, going on to say there is a risk that investors will go elsewhere when choosing where to set up shop.

The report explains how prices are set and how the "global adjustment" is used to compensate for the discrepancy between the market price of energy and how much contractors are being paid.

According to the report, medium-sized businesses are finding themselves in the most expensive position. "These businesses often have energy demand below the three megawatt threshold of the Industrial Conservation Initiative program and are also not included under the Regulated Price Plan and time-of-use pricing. As a result, they are left in the dark when it comes to their ability to reap significant cost savings from shifting their usage during peak periods," the report says.

Jung says she hears from some businesses that have no option about when they use electricity. Since they're not industrial, but can't shift their business hours to off-peak periods, they have to pay the high prices.

"What we've heard from businesses here, and we know it to be true, is they don't have an option. That's when they operate is during peak hours and especially in the summer and they have no opportunity to cut their metered expenses," she

The Ontario Chamber of Commerce's report offers several recommendations about how the system could be better managed. Among them is spreading out the debt retirement charges, increasing transparency and better usage of smart meter data.

Whether the province chooses to follow any of the chamber's recommendations or not, something has to change, Jung says.

thing has to change, Jung says.
"What I'm definitely hearing is [energy costs are] substantially cutting into their [businesses'] profit margins and affecting hiring ... and impacting growth," she says.

A lifelong love affair with art

JENN WATT

Sonny Cook riffles through the back seat of her car looking for her notes and some food ahead of her lunch hour interview with the newspaper. There are bags and papers in front seat and back – a symptom of a life full of hustle and bustle.

She has been modeling for Brian Smith's Portrait Sketching and Development class at Haliburton School of the Arts and the clock is ticking before she has to get back.

This course is taught at the high school, so Sonny parks close to the cafeteria to make it easier to catch a bite on her way

Dressed in a long, pink summer dress, and wooden beaded necklace with her braided hair tied in a stylish side ponytail, she is everything you'd expect in a HSTA student. Maybe she's got the look down because she's been at the college for 28 years.

Cook, 86, has been studying art in Haliburton since 1987. In that time, she's taken some 70 courses, earned a Visual and Creative Arts Diploma and made an impressive list of friends of fellow students and faculty.

Model, artist and student Sonny Cook stands with the portrait Brian Smith did of her Thursday, July 9, 2015 at Haliburton School of the Arts. Cook, 86, has been coming to HSTA since the late 80s and has taken 70 credits with the college. JENN WATT Staff

You couldn't call art a hobby, or even a passion, for the longtime student. Rather, it seems to radiate from her. She is not only thinking about her artwork and what next to paint or write, but how she can make that action even more integrated with her life and with the lives of those around her.

"I'm an RN," she says, sitting on the bleachers beside the football field. "After I'd worked as an RN for a long time, I'd started doing life skills work. In nursing, you get them [patients] better and they get sick again, but with life skills I could help people ... and change their whole lives."

For a while, that is what Cook did. She initially came to Haliburton to head a life skills program for Fleming College.

"But I realized in art you could help people emotionally straight from the emotional base," she says.

As she talks about her life, Cook shuffles through a folder filled with resumes and reproductions of her artwork and photos of her life. With one hand she grabs a handful of greeting cards she's had printed with colour reproductions of her paintings – many of them of turtles and landscapes – with the other she holds her lunch: a cream cheese sandwich on a hot-crossed bun.

Cook's eyes have the mischievous gleam of a young child and she punctuates almost every statement with a soft, genuine laugh.

"I ran away to sea at the age of six in a tugboat in the harbour," she says. "They found me drinking coffee and eating doughnuts with the tugboat captain."

Perhaps that was an indication of things to come. Sonny married George Cook, who was in the navy, and spent many years living by the ocean or on the water itself.

Out of her wallet, she pulls a worn photo of a sailboat. It's the one she built with George when they lived in Nova Scotia. The pair ran a company chartering the boat in that province and the Bahamas for 10 years

"When he [George] came out of the navy, he was threatening to go to the West Coast and my mom found him this house ... near Bancroft," she says. George passed away nearly three decades ago, but Sonny still lives in the Bancroft area. She divides her time between places on Stoney Lake, Bancroft and Florida.

While the couple lived in Nova Scotia, Sonny took a watercolour course, which she loved, but didn't do art again until she came to the college. She seems to be making up for lost time.

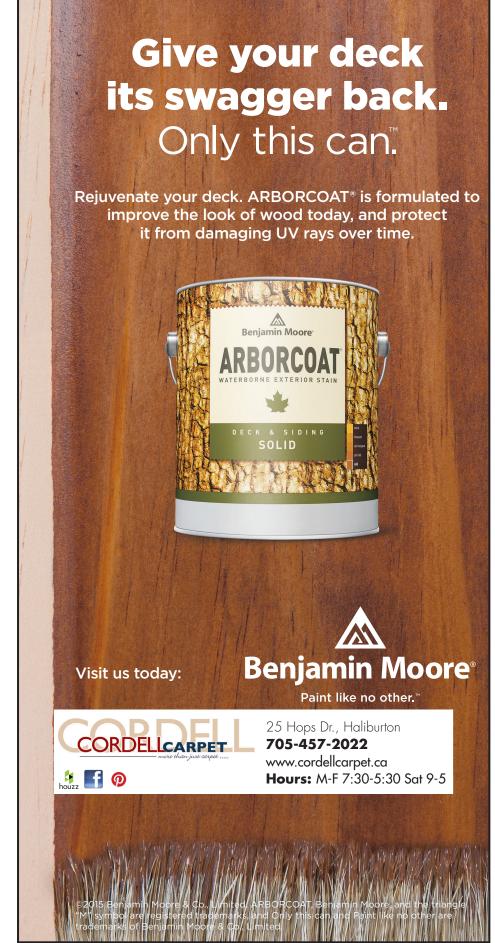

From stone carving to colour theory to expressive arts, Cook has tried her hand at most things and counts several esteemed artists among her mentors and friends including Harold Klunder, Peter Kolisnyk, John McKinnon and John Leonard Lately, she has been focusing on the turtle in her work with an alabaster piece nearing completion and several paintings over the years.

She recalls the first time the notion came to her: "I was walking up to my cabin north of Bancroft. And these words came in my head: 'old mama turtle coming to lay her eggs.'" Those words stuck with her as the turtle emerged as a theme in her work, though her art is quite diverse.

"I'm criticized for not having a body of work," she says as she shuffles through her greeting card collection, each sheet different in styles from pointillist to abstract expressionist to impressionist.

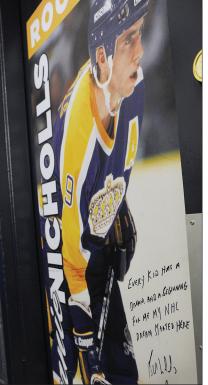

And then she laughs that punctuating laugh. "I just paint how I feel."

Knowledge is power

THE CITIZENRY OF Ontario needs to know more about

It's a dry topic and hugely complicated, but there's one good reason to do so: costs are about to lift off, pushing residential, industrial and business rates to new highs.

Last week, the Ontario Chamber of Commerce put out a report on the province's electricity crisis that should be required reading for anyone paying a hydro bill in Ontario.

Prices are forecast to increase 25 per cent for small businesses and residents in the next five years – 13 per cent for industrial consumers – with no clear plan for alleviating this pressure.

Businesses say that kind of increase will hinder hiring and affect productivity and prices. With residential costs going up at the same time, it's not hard to imagine the collective hit we'll be taking in 2020.

Gaining an understanding of all aspects of electricity in the province is the biggest step – and the first step – to getting things under control.

So far, according to OCC, very few of us know why prices are high and why they are climbing so rapidly.

We are all keenly aware that electricity costs are rising and most of us have heard the stories of Ontario exporting power at rock-bottom prices while paying exorbitant rates for renewable

But how many of us understand the factors that got us here or how the global adjustment works?

Not enough.

Because the bulk of the population isn't aware of what is wrong with our policy around electricity, we aren't able to advocate effectively in how it should change.

It seems that everyone agrees the system isn't working, but it will be those who understand the problems who will be finding solutions.

And not every solution is right for

For example, the OCC is recommending that the debt retirement charge not come off residential bills in 2016, decreasing the burden on industrial users. It also advocates a market-oriented approach to electricity, which would favour lowcost generation, but may hinder renewable (more expensive) options if not managed properly.

If nothing else, the report shows just how much there is to know about electricity in Ontario and how important it is that we seek out alternatives.

Dispensing with what ails our health-care system

N A COUNTRY that prides itself on its universal health-care system, a serious gap in service exists that threatens the health of millions of Cana-

The problem Dr. Lynn is the lack of a Noseworthy national pharmacare program that provides universal coverage for prescription drugs for everyone. In fact, Canada is the only developed country with a universal health-care system that does not have a national pharmacare program.

Currently what we have in this country is a hodgepodge system that involves a mix of public plans, private plans and no insurance at all. Drug coverage depends on our age, the province in which we live, and where we work. This patchwork system is broken and does not serve anyone.

A February 2012 article published in the Canadian Medical Association Journal (CMAJ) estimated one in 10 Canadians cannot fill a prescription because of cost. The net result is that "many patients do not adhere to treatment because they cannot afford their prescription medications, putting them at increased risk of adverse health outcomes," the CMAJ article

Prescription drugs are an integral part of helping people get better and stay healthy ...just as important as physician care and hospital services. If people cannot afford to take the prescription drugs and medicine needed to help them get better, the consequences are obvious: more compromised health outcomes, more health care visits, and more hospitalization. Given these potential costs, a national pharmacare program is a valuable investment that could save money and resources in the long run.

A more recent CMAJ article – this one from March 2015 - bears out this claim. In the article, researchers estimated that universal public drug coverage would reduce total spending on prescription drugs in Canada by roughly one-third, or $7.3 billion. The savings are due in part to bulk-buying of prescription drugs and streamlined administrative costs. As healthcare providers, how can we stand by and let patients and clients suffer just because they cannot afford to pay for the prescribed medication that can help them get better? As citizens of this country, what can we do to help bridge this gap?

In an April 2015 letter to the prime minister, the board of health for the HKPR District Health Unit went on record as strongly supporting the development and implementation of a national, universal pharmacare program in Canada.

All of us can inform our politicians about why a national pharmacare program makes sense and would pay off for everyone in the end. We must hold government at all levels accountable so they take whatever legislative, budgetary or policy actions are needed fix this problem. This fall's federal election provides a perfect opportunity to make the point with candidates vying to become Members of Parliament.

We need to take action now because doing nothing is a prescription for dis-

ESPITE WHAT YOU MIGHT HAVE HEARD, every now and again I am capable of a highly intellectual thought process.
"Spider Man sure is lucky," I said.
"What?" Jenn responded.

"He was just a normal guy until one day he got bitten by a radio-active spider," I explained. "And you know what happened next?"

"He got to wear a suit that looks just like your pajamas?" she

"Is there a point to all this?" she asked.
"Well, yes," I said. "A dock spider bit me and all I got was a swollen ankle."

"Some guys have all the luck," she replied and then she went back to reading her book.

Truer words have never been spoken.

That spider bite happened near Loon Lake, where, as far as I know, there's little to no radioactivity. But I can't help but think had it happened near one of the old uranium mines near Bancroft, my life might have turned out differently. And I said as much to Jenn.

After mulling it over for some time she asked, "Do you need something to do?"

"I've never been bitten by a single radioactive animal," I lamented.

I then rhymed off the list of creatures that have bit me over the years.

'Cat, dog, hamster, my brother, squirrel, bass, pike, goose, duck, woodcock, rabbit, leech, mosquito, black fly, deer fly, horse fly, ants, ear wigs, fleas, ticks, jellyfish, killer

"No," I said. "I just wanted to make sure you were listening." "Guilty as charged," she muttered.

"And yet it happened," I said. "So much for science, huh?"

I then got lost in thought – as I often do – which wouldn't be so bad if I stopped to ask for directions, I suppose.

"I I To be 20" I have said."

"JellyFish Man?" Jenn said.

"Oh, did I say that out loud?" I replied. She just nodded and looked at me funny.

"You've got to admit, it would be an interesting costume," I mut-

But, of course, it was not meant to be. The jellyfish that bit me was in the Mediterranean Sea off the coast of Malta – a place not known for its radiation.

Then again, if I had the super powers of a jellyfish, it could take months to drift over to a crime scene.... and then they'd all have to

"You sure you don't need something to do?" she asked once

"Mosquitoes or black flies are where it's at," I said.

I then went on to explain that if I were to be bitten by any radioactive animal so that I could become a superhero, my first choice would probably be a black fly. The spider, after all, has already

'OK," she muttered, "why the black fly?'

"I can't believe you are even asking," I said. "That makes two of us," she replied.

I argued Black Fly Man would be a perfect central Ontario super-hero. First, he'd be able to fly, which is always an advantage for a crime fighter. Plus, he could bite bad guys on the back of the neck, without his mother taking him to a psychiatrist.

True, the compound eyes would be a pain, if he needed contact lenses. And just as Superman has his kryptonite, Black Fly Man would have his Deep Woods Off, so bad guys would stand a

Other than that, however, he'd be a pretty formidable adversary. "People would call him the greatest pest of all time," I said.

"Are you sure the black flies that bit you weren't radioactive?" she asked.

"Pretty sure," I answered. "Why do you ask?" She just grumbled and went back to her book.

Ban is attack on agriculture

To the Editor,

Re: Praise for province's pollinator protection, June

Contrary to what a recent article in the Haliburton County Echo suggests, bee health will not improve due to restrictions on neonicotinoidtreated crops in Ontario.

Bee health is impacted by a number of factors, including disease, weather, nutrition, habitat, genetic diversity, pesticides and beekeeping practices. Meaningful solutions to bee health challenges require a holistic approach. Focusing exclusively on any one element will do little to improve the overall health of bees.

The Ontario government continues to demonstrate that it is out of step with the collaborative approaches to bee health being taken by the U.S.

and Canada at the federal levels. Ontario's regulations rely on an untested and unworkable pest assessment tool, putting huge risks on the backs of farmers while doing nothing to improve bee

This concerted attack on agriculture is disappointing. Just as we need bees, farmers need tools like neonics to provide us with safe, high-quality foods while ensuring our environment is protected for future generations.

The fact of the matter is that neonics have become a convenient scapegoat even though scientific evidence simply doesn't support the sensationalism. Naming pesticides as the main culprit in pollinator health issues steers us away from finding any meaningful solutions to improve pollina-

Lyme disease confirmed in the HKPR region

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

Less than a week after the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge Health Unit released information and measures to reduce chances of contracting Lyme disease, it has confirmed a positive test result for the disease in its jurisdic-

The confirmation was discovered from a blacklegged tick sample taken from Presqu'ile Provincial Park in Brighton, 78 kilometres southeast of Peterborough. This was part of the unit's surveillance program that gathered samples from conservation authorities and provincial parks throughout Northumberland, Haliburton County and the City of Kawartha Lakes.

"We were not surprised by the results, as we know ticks carrying this bacteria are spreading further into our area," said Richard Ovcharovich, manager of environmental health for the HKPR District Health Unit from a press release. "This just means it's more important than ever for people to take precautions to protect themselves from tick bites."

According to the health unit, ticks that spread Lyme disease act like hitchhikers – settling on tall grasses and bushes until they can attach themselves to a passing animal or person. The ticks will feed on their host's blood, and in some cases may transmit Lyme disease to an individual if attached for more than 24 hours, which is why it's important to detect and remove ticks promptly, Ovcharovich says.

Health Canada also recommends the use of fine-tipped tweezers to remove the tick. Pull the tick straight out, gently, but firmly, grabbing the tick as close to the skin as possible. Do not squeeze the tick because the Lyme disease could be accidentally introduced to the body. Once removed, place the tick in a sealable container like a pill vial and take it to a doctor or health unit for testing. Take note of where the you might have picked up the tick so public health workers to identify areas of high risk. Use rubbing alcohol and/or soap and water to cleanse the

It's recommended that people wear light coloured long pants to detect the ticks more easily and long sleeves, closed footwear and socks. Use tick repellents that have DEET, adhering to the application recommendations.

For those who frequent areas with a great number of blacklegged ticks, they should be examined thoroughly for ticks daily. Close attention to the groin, scalp and armpits should be paid.

Health Canada said those at most risk are those engaged in golfing, hunting, camping, fishing and hik-

They suggest reducing the chance of tick habitats near your home by keeping the grass mowed, removing leaf litter, brush and weeds at the edge of the lawn and around stonewalls and woodpiles; discouraging rodent activity by cleaning up and sealing stonewalls and small openings around the home; moving firewood piles and bird feeders away from the house; keeping pets, particularly dogs, out of the woods and talking to your vet about tick repellents; move children's swing sets and sandboxes away from the woodland's edge and placing them on a wood chip or mulch foundation and adopting hard landscape practices – the use of stone and metals instead of soft materials like soil.

The blacklegged tick is most often found in southern British Columbia, southeastern and south-central Manitoba, southern, eastern and northwestern Ontario, southern Quebec, southern New Brunswick and Grand Manan Island and parts of Nova Scotia.

The symptoms of Lyme disease include fever, headache, tiredness, and muscle and join pain. Another indicator of Lyme disease is a skin rash in the shape of a bull's eye. However, not everyone will experience this. Symptoms can occur as early as three days after infection or as long as a month after a tick bite. Summer Festival puts on Cuckoo's Nest

One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest presented by the Highlands Summer Festival opened July 13. Dale Wasserman's play, adapted from Ken Kesey's dark novel, is a look at the inner workings of a mental institution and what its patients and staff will sacrifice for order amid the chaos. Led by a saccharine but dictatorial nurse, the patients' lives are simple until Randle P. McMurphy joins their ranks and makes them question everything they know. From left, Jack Brezina, Tim Nicholson, and Laura Ostler as Nurse Ratched. The play is at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion July 13 to 17 and 22 to 24. ELIZABETH BATE Staff

Highlands East plein air festival looking for artists

Gary Blundell wants Highlands painters to get outside this September.

The organizer of the Highlands East Plein Air Arts Festival is receiving positive feedback from artists across the province about the four-day event to be held Sept. 10 to 13, but hopes for more local registrants as the summer goes on.

While the event has already seen interested painters from as far away as Barrie, Ottawa, and even Que-bec, Blundell would like to see more local talent showcased at the event. "We could really use some local people signing up," said Blundell. "There could be a whole bunch of people who really love outdoor painting here."

The outdoor painting festival includes a Saturday night dinner for all participants and a juried art show and sale, including a $200 prize. Participants also have the chance to be exhibited at the Rails End Gal-

The gallery showcased some of last year's local artists for the first time this year, and Blundell says it hopes to repeat the exhibit every two years.

The event gives maps of the region to participants and encourages them to explore the area as they spend the first three days painting.

"At least half of the locations are different than they were last year, so we have a whole bunch of new locations. It just gives people different places to go to," he said.

Blundell is an artist with an interest in industrial spaces, so he was cognizant of not including just the traditional lake and forest outdoor spaces when doing the planning for this year's festival.

"We have also included not just natural areas for people to go to paint, like lakes and rivers and rapids, we've also included some industrial heritage sites," he said.

Participants are not required to stick to the mapped out locations, however because the festival coincides with Doors Open, Blundell hopes the event will draw those that want to spend the afternoon hik-ing through the Highlands and watching painters work outdoors.

"I felt that is was a good thing for the municipality and would encourage people to come into the community," said Blun-

After the participants are done painting they'll kick up their heels at the Robert McCausland Memorial Centre in Gooderham Saturday night, and then exhibit their works in the show and sale on Sunday.

Blundell said about 20 per cent of each work sold will go back into the festival, but the remaining money goes to the artists. Artists are allowed to exhibit up to six works at the sale, three must be from the year's festival and all of them must be painted outside.

For now the festival only accommodates painters, however Blundell says he hopes to include more media in future years.

"I'm thinking of expanding it down the road," he said.

T'm thinking this could be a stepping off point to something bigger."

The Games are Here

Preserve first natural course in multi-sport event

JENN WATT

The Gull River offers a challenging, natural course for kayak/canoe slalom. That's why the Pan Am Games is hosting its event here and why those who know the course believe it's set to become much more popular in coming years.

Eight-hundred metres of rolling, swirling water at the Wild Water Preserve has attracted thousands of paddling enthusiasts and curious beginners over the years and plenty of large events including canoe slalom world cups in the '90s.

On July 18 and 19, it will host perhaps its most wellwatched competition: the Pan Am canoe/kayak slalom, with athletes racing down the river and bobbing through gates, for a chance to take home a medal.

"It can't help but increase the profile of both the sport of canoe slalom and also the magnificent venue that we have on the Gull River and the Minden Wild Water Preserve," says Jim Tayler, president of Whitewater Ontario, which co-owns the venue with the Township of Minden

"We're going to broaden the depth of knowledge about the Gull to the other countries and the other athletes who are participating. My guess is that many of them have not necessarily paddled on a natural river like the Gull. Many of them are paddling on artificial courses." Pan Am is the first time the canoe/kayak slalom will Pan Am is the first time the canoe/kayak slalom will be held on a natural whitewater course during multisport games. Generally, those who compete do so on manmade structures rigged with water pumps and concrete channels.

"It's part of the way the sport has evolved," says Tayler, "and I think everyone is actually kind of thrilled that we're taking this particular event right back to the roots of paddling, which is on an open river in a beautiful environment with very challenging whitewater. It speaks to the original spirit of paddling in our country."

The norm in major competitions, particularly in Europe, is artificial courses, he says.

Russ Duhaime is a local kayaker and property manager of the Minden Wild Water Preserve. He says competitors are likely ambivalent about the technical differences between natural and artificial courses, but he expects the physical beauty of the Gull will be striking for them

"It probably doesn't really matter all that much to the paddlers. They're going to get similar features regardless," says Duhaime.

"A manmade course is like a canal. It's not visually appealing at all. You've got concrete banks and plastic boulders and whatnot. It feels safe and controlled."

A natural course, on the other hand? It has the unexpected, thrilling experience of nature.

"Sitting on that river any given time, I'm not a religious person, but it's almost a religious experience; the energy that comes from that water and you're just surrounded by nature. It's a beautiful place," he says.

Duhaime first became acquainted with the preserve when his son, Connor, said he'd like to take a class about 15 years ago 15 years ago.

"At that point in time, there was one local instructor and we went out and the two of us took a course with her and afterwards ... I said, 'that's it for me. I don't like it,' and he said, 'I love it.'"

To keep his son company, Duhaime kept with it, eventually growing to love it and teaching kayaking himself.

Perhaps because the preserve is nestled in the forest down Horseshoe Lake Road, visitors and even some residents don't know it's there. But in the Ontario paddling community, the site is well known.

"Outside of Minden, anyone who knows anything about paddling is very aware of the Gull River," says Duhaime.

Besides being a technically challenging course, the Gull River is also special because of its long season, he says. While it's common to find kayakers out as soon as snow begins to melt, on many natural venues, the water runs out in the summer. Not so for the Gull.

"We have a season that often starts as soon as snow begins to melt and runs right through until it's too cold to paddle," he says.

For instructors, the longer season offers opportunity not found in other places.

"The Gull, the way it's designed, has good flow all year long," says Randy Mitson, marketing manager for Algonquin Outfitters, which runs classes through Boatwerks in Minden. Because of the Pan Am Games, the

Did you know?

This year's Canadian team is boasting its largest delegation of athletes with 719 for a multi-sport Games representing 41 disciplines (36 Pan Am sports and 15 Parapan Am sports).

Toronto won the privilege to hold the Pan Am and Parapan Am Games (from July 10 to 26) on Nov. 6, 2009 and beat out Lima, Peru and Bogota, Colombia.

and beat out Lima, Peru and Bogota, Colombia.

The event is being in held all around Toronto, the Greater Toronto Area and beyond. The Games stretch around the Golden Horseshoe from Welland and St. Catharines in the west to Oshawa in the east. Minden is the farthest point north.

History and general information

The Games are held every four years and precede the Olympics by a year.

It is third largest multi-sport games, coming behind the Olympics and the Asian Games.

The Games includes countries from North America, Latin America, South America and the Caribbean. With the exception of the first Pan Am games, held in Buenos Aires in 1951, Canada has competed in every one since the first one in 1955 when it was held in Mexico City. This is the third time Canada has hosted the Pan Am Games. Winnipeg hosted them in 1967 and 1999. Canada won a nation's best 196 in 1999. It's Ontario's first international multi-sport competition since the 1930 British Empire Games in Hamilton.

We are currently third in medals with 1,696 behind

We are currently third in medals with 1,696 behind Cuba, which is second with 1,929 medals and the United States, who are first with 4,172 medals.

There has been one winter edition of the games hosted by Las Lenas in 1990. Canada was one of eight countries that participated. Seven medals in alpine skiing were won.

company hasn't been able to do the instruction it normally does, as the site is fenced off in preparation of the event. "Right now the river is closed down," says Mitson. "For us, it's a blessing and a curse. We don't have access to 'our river.'"

He explains that although the event has slowed their normal activities, in the end the improvements to the site – such as the upgrades at the Roger Parsons Centre – and the attention Pan Am will bring to Minden are worth the short-term inconvenience.

"The legacy of it though is going to put the Gull River on the map," he says.

Right now, when people think of whitewater canoeing and kayaking in Ontario, the Ottawa River springs to mind. The Gull hasn't received as much publicity and hasn't become as commercial.

"It's always kind of been the little gem in Halibur-ton County that isn't totally on the map. A lot of people come because they know there's not going to be a hundred other kayakers there."

Mitson anticipates that after the games, some new faces will be seen at the river's edge.

faces will be seen at the river's edge.

For Tayler, the Pan Am Games bring the possibility of more international events in Minden.

"There's always the possibility that we'll be looking at hosting other world-class events at the Gull now that we've got this improved facility there," he says.

Whitewater Ontario's capacity to put on big events has been enhanced by this experience, he says.

"Maybe this will serve as a catalyst for future world class events and I would fully expect the town would be behind it."

Pan Am venue restrictions

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

Close to 7,000 athletes from 41 countries are coming_to compete in 365 events for the Pan Am and Parapan Am Games and organizers wants everyone on their best behaviour and have outlined a set of rules for venue goers to make sure.

Like any sporting venue, the usual weapons (firearms, knives, pepper spray and noxious substances), explosives, narcotics, alcohol and food is not allowed. The exception with food is for those with babies or who have dietary restrictions.

However if you feel the inclination to come equipped to play some road hockey or an impromptu game of baseball, think again as hockey sticks, baseball bats, racquets, billiard cues are restricted.

Now if you want to cheer your country's athlete that's OK, but if want to rely on air horns, trumpets, whistles or thunder sticks to save vour voice, vou better warm up vour throat because the aforementioned are disallowed.

The list of restricted includes a variety of transportation options such as bicycles, canoes, kayaks, boats, scooters, skateboards or roller blades.

Keep your giant flags at home because they'll be limited to two metres by one metre with flagpoles 0.9 metres or less. Coolers, ice chests and large knapsacks are also not permitted.

The Minden Wild Water Preserve, or MWW, is among three other venues that permit the use of a golf

REEL PADDLING FILM FESTIVAL

The Pan Am Games hosted by the Minden Wild Water Preserve is giving athletes an opportunity to earn an Olympic spot.

Although the ICF World Championships in September is the primary Olympic qualifier, there is one spot for the Americas in each event: men's K1, women's K1 and men's C1. However according to a press release from the Canadian Olympic Committee "the Pan Am results will be used retroactively to calculate which countries have earned Olympic spots

Katie's Run giving hope and raising funds

JENN WATT

Editor

Katie Woudstra used her time at the microphone to give hope to those struggling with epilepsy. Three years without a seizure, Woudstra was emotional standing in front of supporters at the fourth annual Katie's Run at Sir Sam's July 11.

When she first started having seizures in 2010, some people around her didn't know how to help, often doing the wrong thing or giving the wrong medication. It was fright-ening and frustrating.

On Saturday, she was able to share her hopeful story with those who had walked, biked and jogged wearing the run's distinc-tive purple T-shirts to raise money for epilepsy research.

"It's so much bigger than this day and this run and all these stories," Woudstra said. "I'm so humbled ... to look out and see all this purple and from the bottom of my heart I thank you."

Alongside Woudstra was OPP Sgt. Rob Jamieson, who has also struggled with epilepsy and has been seizure free for 11 years. It took many years and plenty of setbacks to find the right medication to stop the seizures and Jamieson said the trial and error he went through should give hope.

"No matter what you want to do in your life, there were people who counted me out too," he said.

'I hope one day that we're really on top of this disorder and I think the awareness of it into the community is one of the biggest things and once people realize it's nothing to be afraid of – that it's actually quite common when you look at the statistics - as long as we can be there for each other eventually some of the stigmas associated with epilepsy will dissipate.'

Katie Woudstra speaks to the group of participants following the run.

In an interview on Saturday, Woudstra said it's been challenging at times putting one of the most private parts of her life out into the world to raise money for epilepsy

"When I meet new people I don't come out with it. I have to trust them,' says Woudstra, who is now studying at Redeemer University near Hamilton.

And yet her name adorns the T-shirts and hats seen at the fundraiser each year. She says the trade-off has been worth it, with huge support from friends, families and strangers and tens of thousands raised to help others.

It's so much bigger than this day and this run and all these stories.

Geoff Bitten, who completed the run, gives his son Trystan a hug after he finished the 2.5 km walk at Katie's Run at Sir Sam's in Eagle Lake on July 11. JENN WATT Staff

People sometimes ask her, now that she's gone three years without a seizure, why she still does the event.

"It's showing people you're not chasing an impossible dream," she says.

Early totals from Katie's Run this year put funds raised at more than $15,000 with money still coming in. You can donate by going to katiesrun.ca.

Cash calendars fund community projects

Leave something behind. Make an enduring difference in the Highlands. The Haliburton and District Lions Club is calling on all seasonal residents, cottagers and visitors to the Highlands to purchase a Super Cash Calendar

The Lions raise money so that they can give it away to those in need. The list of recipients is long and everincreasing. It includes, but is certainly not limited to, aid for victims of fire, sending kids to camps, purchasing prescription glasses and medical supplies and financial support for numerous non profit groups and organizations such as Food 4 Kids and Fuel for Warmth. Lions are here to help. They can help more people more often if you help by purchasing a Super Cash Calendar Raffle

Here's how it works:

- Only 350 Cash Calendars will be sold! You have a chance to win every month for 12
- Monthly draws will take place on the second Thursday of each month from October 2015 to September 2016 at the Haliburton and District
- Lions Club Meeting. Cash Calendars cost $65 each. That's just $5.42 per
- You win cash! Three draws three cash prizes every month. First ticket drawn wins $100 cash. The second ticket drawn wins $200 cash and the third ticket drawn wins $500 cash.
- All tickets drawn are returned for future draws.
- Look for the Lions and purchase a ticket at the Lions barbecues at Curry Chevrolet on Saturday, July 18 and at Art in Park on July 24, 25 and 26. Call 705-457-3768 or email gailstelter@sympatico.ca today! Don't miss this opportunity to leave something behind. Something very good!

HCPL's DVD of the Month The Imitation Game

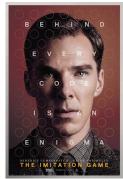

Bombs and guns weren't the only weapons used during the Second World War, information gathered by spies was critical in determining the military strategy on both sides, and much of the key information needed was hidden in coded messages. At Bletchley Park a team of British engineers and mathematicians worked tirelessly to break the code of the German Enigma machine, a nearly perfect encryption device that hid German military secrets from prying eyes. Among those brilliant minds was Alan Turing, now credited as being the father of theoretical computer science and artificial intelligence.

Inspired by the biography Alan Turing: The Enigma, The Imitation Game is a dramatization of Alan Turing's time at Bletchley Park starring Benedict Cumberbatch as Alan Turing and Kiera Knightly as fellow code breaker Joan Clarke. Both the biography and the film are available to reserve at the Haliburton County Public Library.

Wildlife in your backyard

Nancy Stinson sent in this photo from her home on Drag Lake. The carving was a present from her son and his family and Stinson says they put it out on the rock at the edge of the water every year. "I kept hoping that sometime a real heron would come along and stand beside it to take a picture. On June 26, it happened," she writes. The heron was carved by Steven Kenzora of Peterborough.

New Horizons at the Haliburton Highlands Museum

By Kate Butler

Do you have traditional skills you'd like to share? Do you quilt, spin, knit, bake or perhaps do woodworking? Are there traditional skills you'd like to learn? Perhaps canning, gardening, sewing or old-fashioned games? When the first settlers came to the Haliburton area in the 19th century, a great deal of knowledge would have been passed from person to person and generation to generation informally – especially when school was out! We're hoping to tap into this aspect of Haliburton's past through a grant we've received from the New Horizons

Visitors to the museum often tell us that there are skills they regret not picking up from family members when they were younger and we know that seniors in our community have a vast array of skills and knowledge to share. Through this program in partnership with the Dysart et al recreation program, we hope to close the generation gap and preserve skills that might otherwise be lost, as well as getting people more active throughout our community. But we need your help!

We're seeking seniors who are willing to volunteer some time and their skills to teach children, youth and young adults. The focus will be on hands-on fun and learning together. You can volunteer as little or as much of your time as you like. The museum will provide the materials required by the volunteers, and there will be no charge for the children to participate.

The museum is hosting an open house on Saturday, July 18 from 1 to 4 p.m. to launch this exciting program and we'd love to see you there! Everyone is welcome to stop by the Haliburton Highlands Museum (66 Museum Rd.) to get more information, check out some demonstrations, try your hand at a couple of new skills and enjoy some tasty treats. If you have any questions or you would like to get involved with the program, please contact Kate Butler at the Museum at 705-457-2760, or email

Rivers' life remembered by family and friends

wilberforce

Hilda Clark

To honour the life of Sam Rivers his family and friends filled the Harcourt Community Chapel on Saturday, July 11. Immediate family members received relatives and friends from 10:30 a.m. to noon.

A funeral service followed conducted by the chapel pastor Charles Hughes with Evonne Hughes accompanying hymns on the piano.

Samuel Cyryl Rivers died peacefully on Sunday, July 5 at Extendicare in Haliburton. He had become a resident there recently. Though not in good health since his wife Dorothy (Peck) died in 2013, Sam, with family support had been able to cope at home.

Sam was born and raised in Minden. He and Dorothy were well known in that area and West Guilford. He and Dorothy moved to Wilberforce in the 1960s to operate Sam's Texaco Service Station right in the village. Being very adept at things mechanical, Sam was always willing to help friends and neighbours both in the business and as a friend.

He and Dorothy were very involved in the establishment of the Harcourt Chapel. Sam was a stalwart member and became an elder and a deacon.

During the eulogy time many recalled how Sam had been helpful in their lives and in the community. He and Dorothy were dedicated in their work with the Gideons organization. Many Bibles were distributed as a result of their work.

And Sam's family would appreciate that donations in his memory go to the Gideons.

Sympathy is extended to daughters Susan (Larry) Ellison and Virginia Rivers and son Tom and all of Sam's family and friends.

Craft and story times at the Wilberforce library branch on Thursdays at 1 p.m. have begun. They will continue on Thursdays until the end of August. Children must be accompanied by an adult.

Joan Clark's family and friends helped her celebrate an upcoming special birthday recently. A surprise party was held at the home of her niece Brenda and Byron Kellar on Baptiste Lake on July 4. It was a few weeks early so more family could be there. It was a fine party with good fellowship, good food and great

And there is still time to wish Joan a happy 80th

We note that work on the food bank addition to the LWMC is progressing.

Hope to see you at the Penny Raffle at the arena this Saturday, July 18. It's open 1 to 3 p.m. and 5:30 to 8 p.m. with the draws starting at 8 p.m. To win prizes you have to be there with ticket stubs or have another person bring them.

The curling club is holding a spaghetti supper just across the street from the arena at the LWMC from 5 to 7 p.m. on Saturday, July 18.

Virginia 'Ginger' Muenzel

(Resident of Cranberry Lake, West Guilford, Ontario)

It is with heavy hearts the family announce Ginger's sudden passing at Extendicare on Thursday evening, July 9, 2015 in her 78th year. Beloved wife of Edgar 'Éd' Muenzel. Loving mother of Rita Parent (Daryl), Edgar (Jennifer) and David (Laurie). Cherished grandmother of Jeremy (Kim), Kari Lynn (Will), Matthew, Stephanie (Steve), Madison (Michael), Courtney, Louis, Whitney (Satye), Alexandrea (Riley) and great-grandmother of Rylan, Liam, Tayler, Oliver and Nora. Fondly remembered by her many nieces, nephews, other family and friends. Ginger was the former president of Rails End Gallery, loved volunteering around the community, traveling to the East Coast, and her organic vegetable gardens; she also enjoyed writing the Northern Lights Column for the Haliburton Echo.

Visitation, Memorial Service & Reception

Friends are invited to call at HALIBURTON COMMUNITY FUNERAL HOME 13523 Hwy 118, Haliburton, Ontario 705-457-9209 on Friday morning, July 17, 2015 from 10 o'clock until the time of Memorial Service in the Chapel at 11 o'clock. As expressions of sympathy, donations to Extendicare - Proud Pioneers or the Alzheimer's Society - Kawartha Lakes would be appreciated by the family.
